

Tiny Words Worksheet

Place your acetate/Sellotape over the line of words which is just too small to read comfortably. Now drip a drop of water onto the middle of the acetate/Sellotape. You may want to add more drops. Add them carefully to make a dome of water. This is your lens. Can you get it to magnify the words?

Can you improve the magnification?

Can you slide the lens over the whole sentence without the dome of water spreading out?

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."

Tiny Words Worksheet

Place your acetate/Sellotape over the line of words which is just too small to read comfortably. Now drip a drop of water onto the middle of the acetate/Sellotape. You may want to add more drops. Add them carefully to make a dome of water. This is your lens. Can you get it to magnify the words?

Can you improve the magnification?

Can you slide the lens over the whole sentence without the dome of water spreading out?

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."

"But it was not til the last two months of the same year before I felt the least encouragement for spending the starlight nights on a grass-plot covered with dew or hoar frost without a human being near enough to be within call."