

THE EXHIBITION

The themes of China were developed throughout the schools in numerous ways. This resulted in a wealth of written and artwork, which was displayed at the Assembly Halls at an exhibition that accompanied the performances. To celebrate the British Museum's Terracotta Warrior season, all the schools contributed to a special project in which students and many staff made and decorated their own terracotta warriors, over 300 of which were featured in the exhibition.

Confucius Says has been a resounding success ...and delivered an outstanding performance ... every teacher contributed in some way and the exhibition was a showcase for excellent work across all the participating schools.

A variety of activities including Chinese theatre groups, fan and handkerchief dance classes, dragon dance for the Infants, Chinese story-telling sessions and many more ongoing activities throughout the academic year resulted in putting up a range of exciting, fantastic and brilliant displays around the school, some of which were exhibited in the Assembly Rooms.
