

On 12th July 2006, the massed choirs, together with The Fürther Streichhölzer Orchestra and Soprano Alison Buchanan began rehearsing together in London. The premiere of Hear OurVoice took place at The Bloomsbury Theatre on 15th July.

It taught me how to think through a child's point of view about hope – about devastation. I would not have had any idea without Hear OurVoice.

I've been surprised by how some of the students have made great leaps in understanding and seem to have grown into deeper thinkers – much more focused. [They] really amazed me with their dedication... hopefully the children will take the strength of character they have gained and work to never allow persecution to happen again.

I've learnt about really meaning it when you sing the words so the audience can picture the feelings really well and that if you sing the words with real emotion the audience can understand it even if they don't speak the language.

I know now how really awful it was and how the children must have felt.
